January 10, 2012

Escondido, California based Sound Image, a leading provider of audio systems for touring and installation applications globally, is the second American company to join Adamson's Project Energia. The significant investment in Adamson's E15 system was no surprise to Sound Image president, David Shadoan. Shadoan comments, "Adamson kept us closely informed as Energia was developing. As soon as beta testing began, we confirmed that we would join in Phase One. The Sound Image philosophy is to deliver leading technology and to stay ahead of the curve. Energia was a simple choice. This system is progressive and a very powerful solution. We look forward to getting it on the road."

Sound Image has carried Adamson Y-Axis and T21's in their inventory since 2007 and the move to the Energia series was a natural step forward. Adamson Systems Engineering, President, Brock Adamson comments on the new Energia Beta Partner, "Dave and his team package and deliver a quality product and service to a wide range of artists. We have worked together with Sound Image for years and their engineers always come back wanting more. They offer a strong presence in international touring and we are happy to see them join the growing team of global Energia users."
